Tories accuse PM of Queen's Speech scare tactics...

BLAIR TO TERRIFY US INTO 3RD TERM

TONY BLAIR kicked off his bid for a third term in power yesterday by declaring war on terrorists and yobs.

Unveiling a massive new programme in the Queen's Speech, the Government launched assaults on global mass killers and local litterbugs and graffiti artists.

Mr Blair signalled that "safety and security" will be key to his re-election campaign. He was immediately accused of scare tactics to frighten people into voting Labour. Tories said ministers were bringing in "a police state without the police".

Conservative Party co-chairman Dr Liam Fox said: "It is clear that they are trying to raise the fears from terrorism in the country at the present time. I think that is quite despicable, but it is a desperate Government."

But Mr Blair said: "The threats faced by this country and every other major country are real."

Streets near Parliament were shut amid unprecedented security as the Queen addressed both Houses in the Lords.

Stunt

The centrepiece of her speech - written by ministers - was Home Secretary David Blunkett's plans for ID Cards.

Other new measures included a British version of the FBI and purges on drug dealers, binge drinkers, paedophiles and people smugglers.

But with the election expected next May, most of the proposed laws are likely to be postponed for at least a year.

At Westminster, the speech was widely seen as a blatant election stunt.

Tory leader Michael Howard said: "After seven years and five months before the General Election, all we get from this Government is more rhetoric, more promises and more talk."

The Queen's Speech promised:

TERRORISM AND CRIME

ID cards with microchips containing secret personal information to fight identity fraud.

The cards, which will cost £85 with a new "biometric" passport, will be introduced by 2007 but won't be compulsory... yet.

A new "Untouchables" detective unit - the Serious Organised Crime Agency.

Customs and Excise merged with Inland Revenue to crack down on fraud.

Arrest and search powers for Community Support Officers. Powers for police to smash

PROMISES: Blair addressing Commons yesterday animal rights extremists who target scientists' homes.

Legal Aid bill slashed by cutting funds for rich crooks.

Probation Service merged with Prison Service so one agency deals with criminals.

YOBOS AND DIRTY STREETS

Powers for police and councils deal with nuisances, including on-the-spot fines to tackle graffiti, fly-tipping, dumped cars and loutish behaviour.

Tougher sentences for young offenders.

BOOZE AND DRUGS

Drug offenders tested on arrest. "Having drugs in bloodstream" will be an offence. New crackdown on drunken yobs, but help for alcoholics.

ROAD SAFETY

New penalties for drink-drivers and dangerous motorists.

Fine for using a mobile phone while driving doubled to £60.

New penalties for foreigners dodging motoring fines.

Worst motoring offenders will have to re-take driving test.

CREDIT AND LOANS

A crackdown on Britain's £60 billion credit-card debt.

Borrowers will be able to challenge dodgy credit deals.

Loan sharks face ban.

EUROPE

Referendum before signing European Constitution.

Foreigners from EU may be allowed to vote.

TEENAGERS

Cash for teenagers aged between 16 and 19 to stay at school or go into training.

SCHOOLS

Less red tape. Spot inspections by Ofsted and annual parents' evenings ditched.

"School profile" guides to help parents choose where to send children.

LIVING WILLS

Law to let patients make an advance decision to refuse medical treatment.

LOTTERY

Greater say for public on where Lottery cash goes.

REAR-ENDED!

Mini-cab driver Cornelius from London was patiently waiting at the traffic lights when "crunch!" he was suddenly rear-ended by another vehicle. It happens to drivers all too often, only this time Cornelius suffered shock and severe whiplash injuries. Cornelius was clearly not to blame and needed some expert advice so he decided to call Accident Advice Helpline. Having talked to their expert advisors Cornelius made a successful claim for compensation and was awarded £4,265 for his suffering.

Our man's view

THE Premier must have been taking lessons from axed Tory Boris Johnson.

He was awkward and stumbling while defending his latest plans in the Queen's Speech.

In a shambling performance he kept ruffling his hair and fiddling with his glasses - just like doofy Boris.

It went down well with his supine audience of docile Labour MPs.

Perhaps the PM realises the smoothie act doesn't work any more. Desperate for voters to love him again, as he tried to come across as endearing.

Tory leader Michael Howard's response was feeble - and virtually ignored by his own backbenchers.

As long as there's no contest, Mr Blair can get away with playing the clown as long as he likes. In the Commons, at least.

But surely the voters won't be such a pushover.

ROBBIE: I BEDDED 4 OF THE SPICES

But which one said NO?

EXCLUSIVE

ROCK love god Robbie Williams bedded FOUR of the Spice Girls, he revealed yesterday.

And last night the guessing game was on to work out which unlucky lady missed out.

Randy Rob had famous flings with Ginger Spice Geri Halliwell and Melanie "Sporty" Chisholm.

His best mate, actor Max Beesley, 33, once dated Scary Spice Melanie Brown.

Fling

But 30-year-old Robbie's latest revelation - in a radio interview in Argentina where he is currently on tour - left showbiz insiders scratching their heads.

He told a DJ on one of Buenos Aires's top radio stations: "I've only got one left to have had all the Spice Girls."

The claim was the most daring yet from the outrageous pop star.

He has bragged before of bedding two Spice Girls - and hinted he may have enjoyed the company of a third. But he has never gone as far as saying he got passionate with all bar one of the members of Britain's most successful female pop group.

One source said: "The Geri and Mel C relationships were well known, and one other fling was hinted at in the past.

"But if he's saying he's slept with four of the girls it means he either got it on with his best mate's woman, or Posh Spice - or both.

"Basically it means he's slept with two out of Posh, Scary and Baby (Emma Bunton).

"It's a stunning revelation. He's a lucky boy!"

Robbie came over all coy and refused to say who it was in the radio interview - but he did reveal he spent the previous night with FIVE Argentinian babes.

Last night the star was playing an exclusive private gig in Buenos Aires. Prince Harry, who is on a working break in the country, was due to be among the 200 VIPs in the crowd.

for four years - says she's not superhuman enough to keep her cool when they row.

"I lose it big time," said Hell's Kitchen winner Jen. "I start throwing things, punching people, screaming and stamping my feet.

"I'll chuck anything I can get my hands on."

WORRIED pop babe Jennifer Ellison longs to be a superhero so she can spy on bad-boy fiancé Tony Richardson.

Jen, 21, revealed: "My superhero power would be to make myself invisible so I could see what he gets up to when I'm not there."

She beats Sophie in boob duel

BUSTY blonde Nancy Sorrell won the jungle battle of the boobs last night when Sophie Anderton moaned: "I've got no cleavage."

The gorgeous I'm A Celebrity pair stripped down to their bras to compare assets in a sizzling sunbathing session.

Fran Cosgrave - who we revealed yesterday has a crush on Nancy - looked on open-mouthed as the giggling girls

by PETER DYKE
in Australia

peeled off their clothes. But former Wonderbra model Sophie admitted she couldn't compete with Nancy's bust.

The 27-year-old told a gawping Cosgrave: "She's got loads of cleavage and I've got nowt. Mine has disappeared."

Former lapdancer Nancy, 30, pointed out that, unlike Sophie, she was wearing a bra that plumped up her 34C boobs.

So Sophie fixed the problem by pushing her 32B breasts together, saying: "They're just about the same size now."

Sophie smoked a cig as the pair topped up their tans - and warmed up their friendship.

Nancy, 30, told her: "This is lovely doing this together."

Later, when the two girls and Cosgrave put the finishing touches to the camp treehouse, they couldn't resist some more flirting.

As Sophie showed Nancy how to tie the logs together, 26-year-old Fran joked: "My log is really ready to be put on top, Sophie!"

Nancy asked: "Is it slippery?" before overheated ITV bosses cut the sound.

Licking

Sophie has also revealed she was accosted by a lesbian in a nightclub at 17.

She said: "I didn't realise she was coming on to me. I turned round to talk to a friend and realised somebody was licking my leg!"

"She quickly got a Jimmy Choo right in her face."

And there's bad news for viewers hoping to see Sophie getting raunchy.

She said: "I'd absolutely never shag in full view of everybody. I guess a lot of celebrities say they have sex in ridiculous places just to get more press."

"Fine - have your threesomes, go to orgies, stick a cat up your bum, but not in public, please. It just makes me feel sick."

"What Janet Street-Porter, Huggy and I are trying to do is show some skills around the campfire because clearly none of them can cook so they would be up the creek without a paddle."

GETTING CLOSE: Brian and Janet hug after she won nine meals

Janet bitten in snakes ordeal

From PETER DYKE in Australia

SHARP-TONGUED Janet Street-Porter had a taste of her own medicine when she was bitten by an angry bunch of snakes.

The broadcaster was left nursing numerous nips from a tank full of slithering reptiles after yesterday's Bushtucker Trial.

But she shrugged off the bites because she won nine meals for camp – and celebrating by boasting, “I’m great”.

She dashed from the trial straight into the arms of Brian Harvey for some well-deserved hugs for winning their food.

Janet, 57, arrived at the trial area and towered over Ant and Dec.

And she joked: “I’m sorry I’m so tall, what’s the weather like down there?”

She then discovered that there were 10 numbered stars hidden in the tank full of snakes which she had to pick up.

She said: “I think Brian might lynch me if I don’t go back with food – I’ve got to do it for Brian.”

Putting on her protective goggles she said: “I look like a complete prat.”

Brave Janet was bitten on the hand by snakes four times towards the end of the trial.

Quick

After asking for treatment for her punctured hand, she told Ant and Dec: “I know people say snakes are not venomous, but when they bite you, it’s not very nice.”

“They are so quick, it’s incredible.”

When asked if snakes were alien to her, she joked: “Yes, other than snake skin shoes and handbags.”

“I feel an accomplishment in that I have done something that a lot of people would not do at all.”

“I did not get where I am today by being feeble.”

E17’s Brian gave her the warmest welcome back in camp.

Janet told him: “I said I did it for Brian because he says the food is sh*t.”

She celebrated in style, saying: “F**k it, I’m having the rest of my wine to celebrate.”

“Here’s to me! I’m great!”

Rat's life as pests hit camp

■ by MARK JEFFERIES
THE camp is infested with rats, and it's all thanks to the Germans.

Fran Cosgrave was the first contestant to notice the rat droppings yesterday.

He said: “We have rat problems now. It is a major problem and we need to sort it out.”

Huggy Bear added: “I’ve seen droppings in the toilet. We have to try to keep the camp clean.”

We can reveal the problem has been caused by Germans who finished their version of the show two weeks ago.

The contestants were ticked off by the producers for not looking after the site and leaving uneaten food lying around, causing an infestation of creepy-crawlies and rats.

An ITV insider said: “We had a rush just to clear the area of all the rubbish left behind by the German contestants, but they definitely attracted the rats to the clearing.”

The pests are probably black rats, known to be aggressive if cornered.

Jord's JUNGLE VERDICT

■ by MARK JEFFERIES
JORDAN says Natalie Appleton is bubbling in a bid to win the show.

The glam model, real name Kate Price, thinks the cry baby singer is just playing up for the cameras.

And ex I'm A Celebrity girl Jordan, 26, fumed: “I thought when she got picked to do the trial she had a smile.”

“She went ‘Oh God I knew when I began crying people would choose me’.

“Immediately I thought that’s acting – it’s a put-on because she knew viewers would vote for her.”

“I thought she didn’t panic too much, and she coped with it fine.”

“Then when she returned to camp she put it on again.”

“I actually saw her put it on, just like she did before.”

Begged

Troubled Natalie has already been seen by viewers almost backing out of the show numerous times.

She threw up on a helicopter ride into camp, begged bosses to let her go home after just a few hours and needed oxygen after her Bushtucker Trial.

However on ITV1’s This Morning, Jordan’s fella Peter Andre had a different opinion on Nat’s ordeal so far.

The 31-year-old said: “I reckon we need to give her one more shot.”

“If she cries again before the next Bushtucker Trial she gets, then I’ll know she is putting it all on.”

EASY MEAT: A triumphant Peter

PYTHON PETE

by PETER DYKE

JUST minutes after loudmouth Janet Street-Porter tackled the scary Snake Strike Bushtucker Trial yesterday, I was given the chance to brave the same challenge.

And I can happily report that none of the pythons appeared to have been traumatised by their encounter with the frightful looking buck-toothed TV hack - who is driving everyone mad with her moaning.

In fact, I think the serpents seemed quite relieved that their ordeal - coming face to face with gobby red-haired Janet - was over.

By the time I got to the campsite most of the snakes were snoozing peacefully in their tank.

And I'm proud to say I managed to complete the task - collecting 10 stars from inside a glass box containing 40 water, carpet, scuba and jungle pythons.

My photographer Tim Merry insisted the largest serpent - a big carpet python called MeatLoaf - was draped around my neck for a "victory picture". Poor old MeatLoaf didn't seem too pleased and started hissing over the fact we had disturbed his sleep.

I can't say Snake Strike was the most pleasant experience I've had but, then again, having interviewed Paul Burrell last week, I should be used to slimy creatures getting up close to me.

AMELIE: COPS DIG UP A GARDEN

by MARIANNA PARTASIDES

POLICE yesterday dug up the garden of the suspect being quizzed over the murder of student Amelie Delagrang.

They also removed all the furniture from the home of tattooed club bouncer Levi Bellfield.

Detectives are searching for a blunt instrument and said they had found "a number of objects" which would be tested. Bellfield, 36, was still being held last night after detectives secured an extension to the time they could keep him in custody. Forensic teams continued their intensive search at his west London house which the dad-of-three shares with partner Emma Mills.

Police carried two sofas wrapped in brown paper from the house, where he was arrested on Monday, and loaded them on a lorry. Rubble was piled against the side of the house as police drilled and dug deep into the back garden.

A Scotland Yard spokesman said it was likely police would try to secure a custody extension to quiz Bellfield for even longer over 22-year-old Amelie's death.

The French student was battered to death as she crossed Twickenham Green in south London on her own in August.

Police linked the murder to four similar attacks in the area in just 19 months, including the murder of gap-year student Marsha McDonnell, 19, and feared a killer was targeting blondes.

Detectives want to trace a white van which could prove a vital lead.

The Ford Courier - registration P610 XCN - is known to have been around Twickenham Green up to one-and-a-half hours before Amelie died.

Bellfield is not being quizzed over Marsha's murder.

Colin's Great confessions

LUCKY Colin Farrell got to grips with gorgeous co-star Angelina Jolie, 29, at the New York premiere of their epic flick Alexander. But the Irish hunk, 28, earlier revealed that he'd earned his bad boy tag.

He was once suspected of attempted murder - and only escaped the rap because he could prove he was breaking the law elsewhere at the time! Farrell, who plays Alexander the Great in the new flick, told US telly host David Letterman: "They picked me up for attempted murder in Sydney."

"Fortunately my friend had a diary, we'd been travelling together in Australia. And we'd broken the law in a much less harmful way that night."

Colin wouldn't reveal what he and his mate had been doing, however.

JEWEL RAIDERS HAVE P*SSSED ME RIGHT OFF

Sharon rages over £2m raid on Ozzy mansion

SHARON Osbourne said raiders who snatched £2million worth of gems from her mansion "pissed me off".

by STEPHEN RIGLEY

happening in the world – but we have worked for everything.

"I come from Brixton, Ozzy comes from not a very nice part of Birmingham.

"Everything we have got, we have worked our arses off for.

"If I want to make an investment for my kids in whatever way I choose to make it, I should be able to. I worked for every God-damn penny.

"When somebody comes who hasn't worked and wants to take what's yours, it pisses me off."

Ozzy added: "People can say 'oh they can get another', but it's not the point to me. It's the sentiment – you can't buy sentiment."

Distraught Sharon, 52, and Black Sabbath legend Ozzy, who is 56 today, lost rings and gems that were gifts to each other in the raid at their Buckinghamshire mansion at 4am on Monday.

Confront

Hours earlier they had been enjoying a night out at London's posh Ivy restaurant celebrating the birthday of Sir Elton John's partner, David Furnish. The haul included a 24-carat sapphire ring, an investment for their kids – Aimee, 21, Kelly, 18, and Jack, 19.

Two 10-carat rings which Ozzy bought his wife when they renewed their wedding vows two years ago after she beat cancer also went.

Have-a-go hero Ozzy grabbed one of the raiders after getting up for the loo.

He held the robber in a headlock before the thief jumped 30ft from a first floor window.

Detective Inspector Paul Miller of Thames Valley Police, who is leading the investigation, described Ozzy's actions in tackling the raider as "courageous".

Yesterday, when asked if Ozzy would ever confront a thief again, the star barked: "Is the Pope a Catholic?"

He added: "I acted purely on impulse. In hindsight, it could have been a lot worse.

"I could have been badly injured or shot."

Experts fear that although the gems were insured the Osbournes may not be able to claim because they weren't locked away in a safe when the house was raided.

Julian Radcliffe, of the Art Loss Register, said the burglars wouldn't get anything like the full value for their haul.

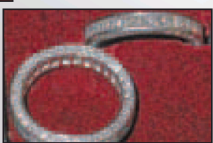

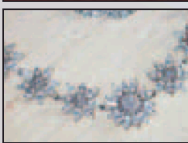

He said: "If something is worth £100,000 and the person buying it from you knows you are a thief you might only get £1,000."

The haul

THE £500,000 sapphire, right, the burglars swiped was one of the rarest in the world.

Dubbed The Swimming Pool, Sharon bought it as an heirloom to pass on to her kids.

McBan for yob pupils

by JOHN MAHONEY

A SCHOOL has been told to burger off by one of Britain's poshest McDonald's after pupils staged a huge food fight.

At the height of the mayhem, involving five youngsters, Big Macs were thrown at other diners, fire extinguishers were set off and toilets and sinks blocked.

Bosses have now banned all 1,711 pupils from the upper-crust Wilmslow High School, in Cheshire, from their local branch.

The restaurant is close to the homes of Manchester United boss Sir Alex Ferguson and striker Wayne Rooney.

Safe

Last night deputy head Gill Bremner said: "The students have been identified and the school is consulting with the restaurant and police about what happened.

"There were a small number of students involved, but the school must take responsibility because they were in school uniform."

McDonald's said it acted because it prided itself in providing a safe and comfortable environment.

Cheshire Police confirmed two youngsters will appear before a youth court on November 30 on criminal damage charges.

QUIZ ACE: Roger Tozer

Winner killed himself

■ by JOHN MAHONEY
A MAN who won £125,000 on TV's Who Wants to be a Millionaire? four years ago killed himself after his marriage collapsed.
An inquest heard yesterday that Roger Tozer, 55, could barely contain his joy when Chris Tarrant presented him with his cheque.
The money should have brought him happiness and security, but instead he died a lonely alcoholic.

Tablets

On July 16, his brother called and found him slumped in a chair. He was unconscious and breathing heavily.
Doctors treated him for a massive overdose of paracetamol tablets, but he died two days later.
After winning the money, Mr Tozer of Leighton Buzzard, Beds., told how he hoped to set up his own travel business.
Brother John Tozer told the hearing he had never heard his brother speak of killing himself.
Bedford coroner David Morris said father of three Mr Tozer took his life.
Verdict: Suicide.

■ FREED British UN worker Annetta Flanigan was back with her husband last night after being held hostage for 27 days by a Taliban group in Afghanistan.
Flanigan, 43, was released unharmed along with two colleagues after almost a month facing the threat of execution.

Drivers in a fix

DRIVERS spend more than £300 million a year on accident repairs to safeguard their no claims bonuses.
One in four motorists pay up rather than put in a claim, according to research by online banking service Egg yesterday.
Over the past five years, 6.2 million people claim to have done this, spending £1.68 billion on repairs, with the cost for 138,000 motorists at over £1,000 per repair.
But younger motorists are the most likely not to protect their no claims bonuses.
Regionally, Scots motorists are least likely to protect their discounts.

JUDE'S BREAST WISHES

■ FANS of Jude Law had to take a back seat when the Hollywood hunk attended the premiere of his new movie Closer in Los Angeles.
The lucky 31-year-old's attention was focused firmly on his gorgeous co-star Natalie Portman, 23, as she revealed her eye-catching curves in a plunging dress.
Fellow Brit Clive Owen, 40, and juicy Julia Roberts, 37, are also appearing in the film - which has the tagline: "If you believe in love at first sight, you never stop looking." It appears Jude's taken the words to heart.

Celeb fears as Lizzy's set to move in

EXCLUSIVE ■ by JOHN MAHONEY

CELEBS were in a huge panic yesterday as bigmouth Lizzy Bardsley got set to be their neighbour.

The foul-mouthed Wife Swap mum-of-eight was spotted visiting estate agents in a superposh village.
She would be living yards from the £1.4million mock Tudor mansion of Manchester United captain Roy Keane, 33, in Hale, Cheshire - which boasts 100 millionaires.
Round the corner is a flat owned by Manchester City's 53-year old boss Kevin Keegan. And further up the road lives 41-year-old Sally Whittaker, who plays Corrie mum Sally Webster.
Lizzy, 31 - who boasted of her £37,500-a year benefits haul - went house-hunting with a genuine £400 Louis Vuitton bag on her arm.

Party

One horrified local in Hale said: "If she moves in, property prices will dive. There'd be a mass exodus."
But there was glee around the family's present home in Rochdale, Lancs, from neighbours eager to see the back of her and 35-year old workshy husband Mark.
"There'll be a street party all day and night the moment that rabble move out," said one resident.
"I feel sorry for the folk who'll have her as a neighbour. They won't know what's bloody hit them."

Santa's nicked

A FATHERS' rights campaigner dressed as Santa Claus scaled Buckingham Palace's gates again yesterday.
David Pyke, 49, from Cheltenham, Glos, chained himself to a pillar 20ft above the ground.
The Fathers 4 Justice campaigner was arrested on suspicion of causing a public nuisance. In September he dressed as superhero Batman in a Palace protest.

BOOZY MUMS PUT A GENERATION IN PERIL

MOTHER'S RUIN: Warning
Posed by model

BINGE-drinking mums are putting a whole generation of babies in danger, health experts warned yesterday.

Their babies face a serious risk of brain damage as more and more women hit the bottle while they are pregnant.

And the hard-drinking culture of young Brits means babies in the UK are at the biggest risk of all, said Susan Fleisher of the National Organisation for Foetal Alcohol Syndrome – set up to combat drink-related infant illness.

"It seems no coincidence that as women are drinking more, there are more children with behavioural, learning and physical problems," she said.

Studies have suggested that one in 100 UK babies could be suffering brain problems and even facial deformity caused by their mother's boozing. They can also be hit by heart, lung and kidney defects.

■ by NADINE LINGE

Dr Sterling Clarren, from the Seattle Children's Hospital, warned: "Damage can occur in the first six to 10 weeks of pregnancy, when some women may not know they are pregnant."

Crime

"So the message is: If you think you are or want to become pregnant don't drink. No amount of alcohol is guaranteed safe."

Dr Clarren – who has set up world-wide centres to look at the effects of drinking during pregnancy – warned that children born to boozing mothers are more likely to have problems at school and turn to crime.

Shame they gave him a parachute

MY first thought on this series of I'm A Celeb - why have they changed the opening titles? They're simply emerging from a limo this time.

I used to love that three-second bit when they got to turn to the camera and do some kind of vogue move that was supposed to represent their essence. Phil Tufnell with a cheeky thumbs-up, Tara P-T with a glass of champagne, Darren Day making a girl cry.

So that was my first thought. My second? Sheila Ferguson has pulled out at the last minute and been replaced by a drag act.

Janet Street-Porter romped home in the "famous friends talking about her" competition. Elton! Paul O'Grady! By contrast, Sophie Anderton just having her boyfriend say: "I hope people tell her to shut up," was as supportive as a chocolate bra. A leech was stuck on Joe Pasquale's toe, proving that even as a double-act he's rubbish. Joe said he hoped on the show we'd see a different side to him. A funny one, hopefully. In fact I think this series will prove that there's less to Joe than meets the eye.

I'm surprised Paul Burrell went the first couple of days without mentioning the person without whom he wouldn't be famous. But I expect the Trevor McDonald anecdotes to start tumbling out soon.

The parachute jump was a great idea, even if they did give Burrell a working parachute. Up in the plane, he said: "This is the nearest you're going to get to God." Especially for someone who's going to SCIENTISTS have proved that women can take more pain than men. That's because men don't have to go out with Darren Day.

Hell, But Burrell has said he doesn't want to talk about the monarchy on the show. At least not until somebody slips him 30 pieces of silver.

Brian Harvey nearly pulled out after a death in the family, but decided: "I'm going to do this for my nan!" Which is very moving. Especially if her final wishes were: "Kill Paul Burrell."

Talking of Brian, he seems to be sharing the same haircut with Fran Cosgrave. Is that allowed?

On arrival at the camp, Natalie said she needed someone telling her what to do - and for the first show I was. It involved the words "up" and "shut".

They say they're going to spring a few surprises on them this series. How about a machete through the larynx of anybody who sings? Both Sheila "New solo album out next week" Ferguson and Nancy "I want to be a pop star" Sorrell have started already. They asked Brian, but he refused. I'm liking the guy more and more.

Well done to Natalie for studying tapes of Kerry from last time and copying them to perfection with that combo of crying at the slightest thing but managing to get her tits to look good in a vest. And for having the first accidental breast falling out.

But no congrats at all to ITV for covering it in a mass of pixels. Unless that was a weird jungle jelly fish that leapt on top of it.

Janet Rotten is as bolshie as I hoped she would be. I was going to say she was the most impressive thing in the show so far. But then I saw Joe Pasquale's manboobs. The girls must be so jealous.

Apocalypse? No!

DID Martin O'Neill spray a can of ricin over the Rangers main stand on Saturday? Did Rangers midfielder Bob Malcolm gun down some nuns?

Was that why he was "taken up the tunnel" by two policemen? And did that hurt?

It would seem Glasgow witnessed the apocalypse on Saturday, judging by some writers' reactions to the Rangers v Celtic game.

I simply saw players and fans of both teams get caught up in the passion and pageantry of the greatest sporting occasion on the planet. Not for the skill or the sport but for the sheer atmosphere.

As always, Saturday was a cracking occasion that made me feel truly alive.

To say this game disgraces Scottish football is wrong. This game IS Scottish football. In fact this game is club football the way it should be. Save your pretty displays for World Cups. Save your sportiness for badminton.

I am a responsible adult and father during the week - I want 90 minutes on a Saturday when I can go nuts. When I can shout and scream and hate and use language I shouldn't, because it's a hell of a lot better way to release my tension than downing 10 Stellas and a gram of Charlie. And, believe me, I have tried both ways.

I am not offended one iota by renditions of the Billy Boys. The people who sing that have as much desire to be up to their necks in Penian blood as the "Buckfast Provos" do to take arms against the British throne to free Ireland.

It's a song one team sings to wind the other up, so they sing a song back that they find equally odious. And as Goldie Lookin' Chain might have sung if they were Scottish instead of Welsh, songs don't stab people, ejjits do.

(However I would like to point out to those Gers in the lower East Section of the Ibrox Main Stand that they were grossly incorrect. I am the first to admit I've have had a few, but I didn't eat ALL the pies.)

A CELTIC fan threw himself into the Clyde after that defeat at Rangers on Saturday. Henri Camara tried to do the same. But missed.

BUSH COMES TO SHOVE...

IRAN may be next on the US hitlist because they may be developing nuclear weapons.

This could just be the start of America invading any country it sees as its enemy. Already plans are afoot to invade Japan because Bush thinks sushi is "freaky". Denmark because they "look smug" and Switzerland because "anybody who's been neutral for that long must be hiding something".

Gloom on the cards

THE British Red Cross has banned images of Jesus from its Christmas cards because it wants to be seen as non-religious when it works in countries like Iraq. I would add that it's also inappropriate, because there's no sign Jesus or his dad is doing anything to help the situation there.

WAYNE Rooney's girlfriend Coleen (aka the Crown Princess of Chav) wants to open up a clothes shop. I'm not surprised. She already has more outfits than Harvey Nicholls.

BRITS are stumping up more than £1 billion a year to provide food for asylum seekers. And here's me thinking Michelle McManus was born in Glasgow.

NOTE to the make-up department of The X Factor: Is it really expensive stuff you use to make Kate look like she's just been crying all the time?

LOVED the headline in Monday's Star about the rivalries in BBC1's Strictly Come Dancing: "Jill and Aled in dance to death" if that's a promise. I might start watching.

ANIMAL charity group PETA wants fish sellers banned because of the cruelty inflicted on cod. They've heard they get battered regularly.

BRIT OF A COMEBACK

Chris is picked to host top pop bash

GINGER nut Chris Evans is to make his telly comeback hosting the Brit Awards, it was announced yesterday.

The 38-year-old is hoping to revive his career – and his fortunes – following his split with wife Billie Piper.

It will be the first TV show he has presented for four years although he is an old hand at the Brits, having hosted the bash in 1995 and 1996. The former Big Breakfast and Don't Forget Your Toothbrush star quit our screens in 2000 after four years fronting TFI Friday.

Chris tried to turn producer, but his Terry And Gaby Show and quiz Boys And Girls both flopped.

Fresh

Now he's pinning his hopes on the Brits. The ceremony, at Earls Court on February 9, will be screened on ITV1.

The channel's entertainment boss Claudia Rosenkrantz said: "Chris is always a dangerous choice – anything could happen."

Evans is clearly hoping to make a fresh start all round – he's planning to clear estranged wife Billie out of his life by selling their belongings on a market stall.

■ by NADINE LINGE

Chris was devastated at the split with the pop star-turned-actress, 22, and decided to sell everything that reminded him of her.

He will be setting up a stall at Camden Stables market in north London to flog the lot off – including a portrait of his sexy ex.

A pal said: "Chris used to work at a market years ago and he's looking forward to going back. It's probably a bit of therapy for him."

JAILED: Sarah Whittaker and David Askew – and the squalor in which their children were forced to live

5 KIDS STARVED AS EVIL PARENTS WATCHED DVDS

Horror of filthy family kept in squalor

AN evil mum and dad were each jailed for seven years yesterday for starving their five kids while they lived in luxury.

Two twin boys aged 18 months were at the point of death, weighing just 4 kg (9lb) each – 40% of the normal weight.

Instead of feeding their children Sarah Whittaker and David Askew, both 24, blew their cash on a giant satellite TV, two DVD players, a computer, PlayStation, video recorder and dozens of films and games for their own neatly-kept lounge.

Hovel

They spent their time boozing and lying in bed.

Meanwhile the kids – the twins, two girls aged four and eight and a boy of three – lived in “Third World” squalor in the rest of the three-bedroom terrace in Wincobank, Sheffield.

Stunned Det Insp Steve Williams, who was called to the house, said: “I never thought I would ever see children in that condition in this country.”

“It is something you would imagine in Ethiopia – not in Sheffield. What we saw beggars belief. The house was appalling.”

“There was human excrement everywhere – complete and utter filth.”

“The mother and father were not undernourished. Their living room was quite nice, but where the kids were living was a hovel.”

■ by JERRY LAWTON

A hospital consultant said he'd not seen a case of malnutrition like the boys in the developed world.

The twins could have died if the eldest girl had not acted as “mother” and raised their plight, Sheffield Crown Court was told.

Whittaker and Askew, who had been lovers since they were 15, admitted five charges of cruelty.

Jailing them, Judge Alan Goldsack QC told the pair people would fail to understand how anyone could allow children to suffer in such a way.

“How in the 21st century can children slip through the net in the way yours did?” he asked.

“Behind the closed doors of your home your children were slowly being starved to death.”

Prosecutor Andrew Hatton said police found that “cruelty and neglect” towards the children was “sustained and protracted”.

The couple's previous home was covered in excrement and there was an overpowering stench of urine which took a month to clean up.

After the twins were born the couple moved into the terrace.

Although a health visitor could find nothing wrong during a visit earlier this year, by the early summer the grim picture was emerging.

Drunk

Whittaker's mum, who was baby-sitting while the couple went to a concert, found the twins, who looked thin, were in filthy babygro's and were wallowing in a dirty bedroom on a urine-soaked mattress with dog excrement strewn around.

Whittaker blamed her depression, but relatives later found the twins huddled together in their cot in even filthier conditions. Then a neighbour discovered the twins motionless in the bedroom with both parents drunk.

Tina Dempster, for Askew, told the court matters had got out of control and he admitted doing little to assist with the children.

Amanda Denton, for Whittaker, said she made desperate attempts to involve Askew in family life but she could not cope.

In the end she just lay in bed failing to act as a mother.

But while the parents spent last night in prison, their five children were in foster care – all making a good recovery in their new, caring homes.

HOUSE OF HORROR: Family home

UNITED STAR WOOS STREET BABE

ON THE BALL: Smithy

TARGET: Street's Nikki

ENGLAND striker Alan Smith is looking for some extra time - by making a play for Coronation Street babe Nikki Sanderson.

The 23-year-old Manchester United star has been blitzing the 20-year-old - who plays hairdresser Candice Stow in the ITV1 soap - with phone calls.

He's even told friends: "I've fancied her for yonks. I think she's gorgeous and I would love to get to know her better."

Nikki, who goes out with a footballer in Corrie, could even become a footballer's wife as we've been told she is interested in Alan too.

We can reveal the £40,000 a week teetotal star is likely to get his wish of a cosy night with the stunning babe who has just kicked her long-time boyfriend into touch.

Nikki has dumped 25-year-old store boss lover Jamie Meakin, telling friends: "I'm too young and not ready to settle down."

EXCLUSIVE

She met blond hitman Alan at a UNICEF charity bash at Old Trafford earlier this year.

Bachelor Alan, who joined United from Leeds this summer in a £6 million switch, has bedded a string of sexy beauties.

They include 26-year-old BB babe Vanessa Nimmo and 21-year-old 32DD lapdancer Elle Sewell.

Last night a close friend of the football ace said: "Alan has talked a lot about Nikki since they met - it would be fair to say he fancies her rotten. She is very pretty and such a nice person.

"He's overjoyed now he knows she's single. He wasn't aware she had a serious boyfriend when they first met but now it looks like something could develop soon. He's got a good feeling about this one."

Alan does well with the ladies but he has yet to settle down.

PENELOPE
Cruz reckons she's self-conscious of her body. The petite star, 30, who split from Hollywood heartthrob Tom Cruise, 42, earlier this year, says she doesn't like people seeing her undress. "When I change I ask people not to look," she said. "I'm not a model." The sexy brunette also hates celeb parties, as she's "much more focused on the work side of Hollywood".

Hunk

"He has told friends how much he likes her. Alan has a lot going for him - a good looking hunk playing for United and England.

"How many girls would have their heads turned by that?" There's three here for starters.

Calendar girl Abi has perfect date

SEX-bomb Abi Titmuss was on fine form when we bumped into her at the launch-party for 39-year-old James Nesbitt's Eat My Goal DVD in London's CC club.

And the 28-year-old vixen confessed that her raunchy 2005 calendar is a best-seller.

She said: "It's great that it is number one at the moment. I'm really, really pleased."

And Abi - a huge fan of Westlife warbler Mark Feehily - will be even more delighted to learn that he thinks she's top totty.

Speaking to us at the Carling Live N'E'R'D after-party at hip club Sketch, the 24-year-old hunk said:

"Abi is a great girl - and I think she is very attractive."

TAMZIN'S HAVING TOP TIME

TAMZIN Outhwaite got into the spirit of things at the N'E'R'D gig. The sexy actress, 34, recently returned from filming with Wesley Snipes in Los Angeles, says she's having the time of her life.

After a boogie at London club Sketch, she told us: "I'm making the most of being a lady of leisure. I have lots of potential projects lined up but, right now, I am just pleased to be back in London with all my girlfriends." Hear, hear.
